RE: Sparks Red

Dear Mr. Kiely:

We, the undersigned Attorneys General, write to express our serious concerns regarding MillerCoors, LLC's ("MillerCoors") decision to introduce Sparks Red, MillerCoors's latest alcoholic energy drink ("AED"). We are particularly dismayed that Sparks Red will contain as much as eight percent (8 %) alcohol by volume -- a significant increase over the alcohol content found in other AEDs.

We have stated repeatedly that AEDs such as Sparks Red constitute a serious health and safety risk for America's youth. Adding caffeine and other stimulants to alcohol is particularly dangerous because these additives tend to reduce the drinker's perception of intoxication and promote the delusion of drinking and functioning without impairment. Although the stimulants may foster the feeling of alertness, alcohol inevitably and unavoidably impairs motor skills and reaction time.

MillerCoors's decision to introduce Sparks Red defies increasing undeniable evidence from medical and public health professionals about the dangers of mixing alcohol with stimulants found in energy drinks.¹ One recent study found that college students who mix alcohol and energy drinks engage in increased heavy episodic drinking and have twice as many episodes of weekly drunkenness. College students who reported consuming alcohol mixed with energy drinks also had significantly higher prevalence of alcohol-related consequences such as sexual assault and injury.²

MillerCoors's introducing Sparks Red mocks your company's oft-stated goal of promoting safe and responsible enjoyment of its products. We urge you to reconsider your position and to refrain from introducing Sparks Red to the marketplace. We are confident that you will consider taking this responsible action.

Very truly yours,
