Creating Life on City Streets: Walkability

January 15-17, Frankfort

A conference in conjunction with the annual winter meeting of the Kentucky Main Street Program. New this year, the public is invited to join local Main Street managers, board members, elected officials and others to learn about current issues in community revitalization. Topics will be of broad interest to communities interested in strategies to preserve and utilize their historic downtown buildings, capitalize on authentic assets, promote heritage tourism and create positive energy that attracts residents and visitors.

Credit offered through Kentucky League of Cities / City Officials Training Center, and the County Elected Officials Training Incentive Program, Department for Local Government.

Full conference registration, including Jeff Speck presentations: $100

Jeff Speck has dedicated his career to determining what makes cities thrive. And he has boiled it down to one key factor: walkability.

Making downtown into a walkable, viable community is the essential fix for the typical American city; it is eminently achievable and its benefits are manifold. Bursting with sharp observations and key insights into how urban change happens, his book lays out a practical, necessary, and inspiring vision for how to make American cities great again.

"A recipe for vibrant street life."

—David L. Ulin, Los Angeles Times

"A remarkably fun guide to making downtowns more pedestrian-friendly."

—Josh Dzieza, The Daily Beast

"Often provocative . . . the book is delightfully acronym- and jargon-free, and most of Speck's suggestions are revolutionary in their simplicity."

—Allison Arieff, New York Times
